CENSORSHIP AND MANY RESTRICTIONS ABOLISHED

THE Censorship Order was revoked yesterday at a meeting of the Government. The staff of the Censorship Office has ceased to function, and to-day's Irish newspapers have been produced without submitting any of their contents to Dublin Castle.

A large number of other Emergency restrictions, imposed under the Emergency Powers Act, 1939, were removed at the same time.

In addition to the Press Censorship, the following is a list of the other Orders which have been revoked:—

Restriction of movements and activities of suspected persons.
Postal, telegraph and wireless censorship.
Power of police to prohibit processions and meetings.
Temporary special police force.
Power to arrest and search without warrant.
Identification of persons in custody.
Control of street collections.
Registration of foreign residents.
Dispensation from sealing of documents by President, Government and Ministers.
Exercise of functions of Taoiseach and members of Government in case of disability.
Sittings of Courts in camera.
Military Courts.
Postponement of execution of certain sentences of Military Courts.
Holding of inquests without juries in certain cases.
Control of collections other than street collections.
Appointments of Bank Holidays, etc.
Acquisition and requisition of goods, vehicles, etc.
Report of military casualties at civilian hospitals.
Appointment and powers of General Officer Commanding the Defence Forces.
Requisitions of credits on Exchequer account.
Transfer of officers holding military rank to marine rank, etc.
Stopping up, diversion and obstruction of public roads.
Evidence in Military Courts.
Censorship of films.
Control of racing and homing pigeons.

Subsidiary Orders made by Ministers for the purpose giving effect to the foregoing are being revoked by the Ministers concerned.

SUPPLIES ORDERS

It will be noticed that the revocations do not include Orders made in regard to supplies of any kind, and it is not to be expected that any relaxation in respect of rationing of foodstuffs will be made for a long time. The revocation of emergency censorship of films does not, of course, affect the ordinary film censorship which was established before the war. It means, however, that Eire may now hope to see news reels and films such as "Desert Victory" and "The Great Dictator."

The Emergency Powers Act, under which the Orders now revoked were made, was passed at the special meeting of the Dail and Senate held in the first days of September, 1939, on the outbreak of war. A few days later a large batch of Orders were made, among them many of those now revoked.

The emergency Military Courts are now abolished and, presumably, they will be replaced by the ordinary Courts.

The Order, now revoked, concerning the exercise of the functions of the Taoiseach and members of the Government, it will be recalled, was made in 1940 after the fall of France in the war, when there seemed danger of possible invasion and internal dislocation in this country. By this Order, made on July 16th that year, it was provided that if the Taoiseach for any reason became unable to exercise his functions his duties were to be performed by the Tanaiste or, in his absence, some other Minister. This Order would override Article 13 of the Constitution, which requires that Ministers are appointed by the President on the nomination of the Taoiseach after approval by the Dail.

SALE OF LORRIES

The Minister for Supplies has revoked Orders made in 1941 and 1942 which were originally made to enable the authorities to keep a check on the disposal of lorries, with a view, particularly, to preventing the sale of lorries for the purpose of illegal exportation. It has now been found possible to dispense with this check, and the effect of the revoking Order is that persons may now buy or sell lorries without obtaining a permit from the Garda Siochana.

The removal of restrictions on the sale and purchase of lorries does not involve any change in the emergency regulations governing the issue of road permits and petrol allowances for commercial vehicles, nor does it affect the restrictions on the sale and purchase of new private cars.

Where He Was Wounded

DECORATING a young officer of the Royal Air Force at the investiture at Buckingham Palace yesterday, the King noticed that his arm was in plaster.

"Where were you wounded?" asked the King, and the pilot replied, with a grin, "In Trafalgar Square on VE-night."

British-U.S. Attitude On Polish Crux

REUTER'S Special Correspondent at the San Francisco Conference states that there is no intention by Great Britain or the United States of allowing the Polish question to be dropped or standing by while the Warsaw Government strengthens its position and the whole issue goes by default.

This interpretation was put on the statement made yesterday by Mr. Anthony Eden, British Foreign Minister, on the breakdown of the Three-Powers' discussions of the Polish situation.

It is stated that Mr. Eden's declaration that it is now for the Governments, rather than the Foreign Ministers, of the three nations to determine what should be the next step appears to foreshadow new joint Anglo-American action on the whole subject.

DIFFERENCES

On being questioned at a Press conference, Mr. Eden replied that there were differences on the interpretation of the Yalta Agreement between the Soviet Union, on the one hand, and Great Britain and the United States, on the other.

Mr. Eden, however, stressed that the difficulties had arisen, not out of the interpretation of the Yalta Conference, but as a result of the action of the Polish leaders.

Strong and intensely vocal blocks of small nations are engaged in drives along three different lines in efforts to increase their power under the proposed World Charter, but final "showdowns" are still in the offing, states a San Francisco (Reuter) cable.

Three members of the British Commonwealth — Canada, New Zealand and Australia—seem to be taking the lead in efforts to gain more power for the smaller nations. New Zealand demanding that the General Assembly should be allowed to accept or reject major decisions of the Security Council, states the Associated Press.

The "Big Five" Powers flatly opposed this proposal on the grounds that action to prevent war might have to be taken quickly, and this could best be done by a small and powerful group.

Hitler's Bomb-proof Cellar

When U.S. troops opened Hitler's safe in his former private home on Prinz Regentenstrasse, in Munich, yesterday, he found, instead of important documents, only twelve copies of the 1st edition of "Mein Kampf."

Under the house, however, was a bomb-proof cellar, with a ceiling of seven-inch steel plates embedded in four feet of concrete. Every room was separated from the next by steel doors, and there was a modern electric kitchen, a small bedroom and several living rooms.

Like everything else affecting Hitler his dwellinghouse in Munich had costly furnishings, modern "gadgets" and expensive paintings, says an A.P. coresrpondent. The upholstery of the couch and chairs in his bedroom had delicate, light colours, such as the average man would not choose. No will was found.

Cabinet's Loss Country's Gain

"When Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly was nominated for the Presidency his colleagues realised that his departure from the Cabinet, where he had been such an outstanding success as Minister for Finance and Minister for Local Government and Public Health, would be a very great loss; but the Government's loss here would be the country's gain," said Mr. G. Boland, Minister for Justice, referring to the Presidential election at a Fianna Fail meeting in Elphin, Co. Roscommon, yesterday.

"Some of us felt sorry that he was a candidate because of his value in the Cabinet, where it will not be easy to fill his place. But we did not know of anyone in public life more suitable for the post," he added.

Mayo Farmer's Will Contested

The hearing was begun before Mr. Justice Haugh and a jury in the High Court, Dublin, yesterday, and adjourned until Monday, of an action brought by John McGarry, Claremorris, an executor, to egablish the last will, dated October 3rd, 1944, of Denis Sweeney, farmer, Caramore, Claremorris, who died on October 5th, 1944, aged 53, leaving about £3,000, most of which he bequeathed to charities.

The will was contested on the three usual statutory grounds by five cousins of the testator—Mrs. Katie Killeen, Miss Delia M. Sweeney, Miss Mary Sweeney and Miss Nora Sweeney, all of Claremorris, and William Kelly, Fairview avenue, Dublin.

Larceny By a Trick.—Philip Walsh, Church street, Dublin, was, in the Circuit Criminal Court, yesterday, sent to prison for 15 months, with hard labour, to date from January 27th, for the larceny, by a trick, of furniture valued at £42 10s.

Turf Theft Fines.—At Bray yesterday, Thomas Lyndon, Pembroke street, Dublin, was fined £5 and ordered to pay £6 8/- compensation for stealing turf, valued at £6 10/-, the property of Philip Reynolds, N.C.R., Dublin.

Jail for Receivers.—Mrs. Bridget Mooney, Henrietta street, Dublin, and Mrs. Christina Farrell, Parnell street, Dublin, were, in the Circuit Criminal Court, Dublin, yesterday sent to jail for six months for receiving wearing apparel, valued at £83, the property of Harry Jacobs, Ltd., Christchurch place, Dublin.

Theft of £1,018 Alleged.—Charged, in the Dublin District Court yesterday, with conspiracy, breaking and entering the Mantle and Costume Factory, 63 Dame street, Dublin, the property of Messrs Verby and Co., Ltd., and stealing £1,018 in cash, Robert Murphy (21), Fishamble street, Dublin, and James Campbell (20), High street, Dublin, were remanded on bail for one week. Detective-Sergeant J. F. Moran said that all the money had been recovered, but not with the assistance of the accused men.

Woman Found Guilty Of Murder, But Insane

Mrs. Elizabeth Rogers, Oldtown, Co. Dublin, was found guilty, but insane, at the Central Criminal Court, Dublin, yesterday, on a charge of murdering her infant daughter, Mary, at the Rotunda Hospital, Dublin, on January 25th, 1945.

Mr. Justice Davitt ordered her to be kept in custody pending the pleasure of the Government concerning her.

The case for the State was that the baby was born in the hospital on January 20th. Five days later Mrs. Rogers was seen beside the baby's cot in the hospital with a lighted paper. The cot went up in flames and, although a nurse took the baby out, it died from burns next day.

Dr. John Dunne, Resident Medical Superintendent, Grangegorman Mental Hospital, said that after an examination he came to the conclusion that Mrs. Rogers was not capable of knowing what she was doing at the time on account of the disorder of her mind.

Dr. Bethel Solomons said he had formed the opinion that the woman was not responsible at the time.

Goering Says Hitler Refused His Advice

Goering, perspiring and uneasy before a battery of war correspondents in Augsburg, yesterday admitted that he had ordered the bombing of Coventry.

The order to bomb Canterbury came from higher headquarters as a revenge for the British bombing of a German cathedral city, Goering said.

He spoke bitterly of Hitler refusing to take his advice in military matters. "When Hitler decided to attack Russia," said Goering, "I referred him to 'Mein Kampf,' where he said that to fight a war on two fronts was dangerous."—(Associated Press.)

RUMOURED JAPANESE PEACE FEELERS

Rumours of Japanese peace offers circulated in diplomatic quarters in Washington yesterday. It was strongly believed in reliable quarters that some such feelers from certain Japanese elements have been put out in the last few weeks, but all Allied officials in a position to give authoritative information on this subject are maintaining strict silence, says a Reuter message from Washington.

It was generally understood that the Japanese have as yet made nothing like an offer of unconditional surrender, which is the only offer acceptable to the Allies.

According to reports certain unspecified political elements have offered to surrender the Fleet and Air Force and to withdraw from all exterior territory if the nations at war with Japan will renounce the right to occupy Japan itself. This offer—rejected by Britain and the United States—is said to have been verified at San Francisco by statesmen whose countries have big stakes in East Asia.

The truth is that the Allies have no intention of altering the unconditional surrender stand which brought Germany to her knees.

On this point there are these facts to be taken into consideration—First—Japanese feelers in the past—especially towards China—have been put out frequently and have been uniformly insincere. Secondly—The main inspiration behind any approaches is believed to come from Japanese agents in Europe, who have seen for themselves Allied power in the full flush of victory. Thirdly—Experts who have studied the recent military and political reshuffle in Japan are of opinion that any attempt at peace-making by the politicians would meet with strenuous opposition from the extremists, who are in full control of the Army.

These experts point out that recent developments may be signs of weakness—a weakness which bombs, guns and propaganda may well be successful in exploiting.

RAGING BATTLE

Heavy coast-to-coast fighting is raging on Okinawa Island, according to the Japanese News Agency. "Powerful enemy units," it said, "supported by tanks, have been attacking since Thursday morning in the forefront of Suris." The news agency said that the Americans crossed the Aja stream under cover of intense artillery and air bombardments and with the aid of amphibious tanks.

The biggest air mining operations in history are paralysing Japan's entire waterborne commerce, it was stated last night, says Reuter's special correspondent at Guam. Super Fortresses, each dropping ten tons of mines, began operations on the night of March 27 to seal off the three entrances to the inland waters, and strewed mines in all the principal harbours, including Tokyo and Nagoya.

This is the first effort in history to impose a maritime blockade, internal and external, on an entire nation.

Lieutenant-General Doolittle, the U.S. Air Commander, speaking, at a Press conference in London yesterday, on the future, and on the maintainance of peace, said: "A large international air force may be the policing medium to ensure peace because of its mobility, but there will always be a navy to supply the air force, and an army to support it."

The long voyage to French ports by American troops who are heading for the Pacific war has begun, but the first combat troops from Europe are not likely to reach the new theatre in much under six months.

T.D.'s Story in Appeal Against £100 Fine

Judgment was reserved until Monday next by Judge McCarthy in the Dublin Circuit Civil Court yesterday, when the hearing was resumed of the appeal by Patrick J. Fogarty, T.D., against a conviction and fine of £100, imposed in the Dublin District Court, for furnishing false information at Lusk Garda Station on October 2nd, 1943, in order to get a permit for Peter Rooney, Ballyboghill, Co. Dublin, in the name of Robert Savage, Ballyboghill, Co. Dublin, to purchase a motor-lorry from Joseph Harford, Swords.

The alleged false infogmation was to the effect that the motor-lorry was purchased by Robert Savage, whereas in fact it was purchased by Peter Rooney, in contravention of Emergency Powers Order No. 177 (1942).

The appellant, giving evidence, said he knew Peter Rooney for 15 years. He never saw Robert Savage until the particular day on which they went to Lusk Garda Station. Referring to the conversation with Savage in the car, Mr. Fogarty said he asked him if he had all the particulars ready for the sergeant and he told him what to do when they got to the barracks.

Mr. S. MacBride, S.C.—Did you say to Savage or explain to him that the purpose of the trip was to get a purchase permit for this lorry so that Rooney would get petrol?—No.

Did you make any reference to petrol for Rooney?—No. There could be no question of extra petrol, as he would be getting an allowance of petrol from John Savage.

Were you on friendly terms with the sergeant in Lusk?—If there was the slightest thing wrong, he would be the last sergeant in the world I would go to.

Mr. Fogarty added that he had no idea that he was doing anything wrong or that he was being used to get extra petrol for Rooney.

Clark Honours Commanders.—Major-General Mark Clark yesterday presented the U.S. Legion of Merit of the degree of commander to Lieutenant-General Sir Bernard Freyberg, V.C., and Major-General Dudley Russell.—(Reuter.)

G.N.R. Defence in Train Meals Case

There was not a shred of evidence to show that the company had been guilty of the smallest degree of negligence, Mr. J. A. Costello, S.C., told the jury that sat with the President of the High Court yesterday, when the case on behalf of the dealers, Mrs. Martha Farrell, 19 Ash st., and Miss Teresa Walsh, Carmen's Hall, Dublin, who each had taken an action against the Great Northern Railway Company, had concluded.

The actions were for damages for alleged breach of warranty in the sale of a meal in the restaurant-car of a Dundalk to Dublin train on June 29th last, Mrs. Farrell and Miss Walsh stating that they contracted typhoid fever from the food. The company denied their allegations.

The further hearing was adjourned until next Monday.

Mr. Costello said that the outbreak of typhoid fever which had given rise to this action had been unprecedented in this country. A large number of people who had travelled on the train took meals in the buffet-car, and had not contracted typhoid or food poisoning, or anything else. On June 29th last, 57 meals had been served in the car, and 25 people contracted typhoid; on the following day, 71 people were served with meals, and seven got typhoid. On July 1st, 109 were served, and 15 got it; on July 3rd, 73 people were served, and only one got it; on July 4th, 55 were served, and nobody got it; on July 5th, 41 were served, and nobody got it; on July 6th 77 were served, and two got it; on July 7th, 59 were served, and nobody got it, and on July 8th, 103 were served, and two got it.

If the outbreak had been due to a carrier, then there had been no negligence on the part of the company, said Mr. Costello.

Patrick Casey, assistant manager, catering department, Great Northern Railway Company, stated that the dining-cars were supplied with all the necessary materials for the staff to use for washing. During 1944, a total of 195,852 meals had been supplied on the dining-cars, and 127,154 on the buffet-cars. In the Dublin refreshment rooms, 93,066 meals had been supplied, and in the new Grosvenor rooms in Belfast 25,134 meals had been supplied. In the various other refreshment rooms, 492,559 meals had been supplied, and 34,662 in the staff dining club; and, with the exception of this particular outbreak, there had been no outbreak of disease, to his knowledge.

John Kane, who had charge of the restaurant-car, said he had never suffered from typhoid fever. He had been medically examined four times since the outbreak, and each test had been satisfactory.

Breadvan Drivers' Dispute In Cork

Unless an unexpected development occurs over the week-end, Cork city will be without its usual bread delivery service next week. The breadvan-drivers' strike notice expires to-night, as does the employers' protective notice of dismissal to all their employees. The dispute relates to the length of the van-drivers' holidays, and frequent attempts at negotiation have, as yet, produced no settlement.

Allied Move To Stamp Out Nazi System

AN intelligence section, to detect and ruthlessly suppress any Nazi underground activities, will be part of the U.S. Military Government in the American zone of occupation inside Germany, the War Department announced yesterday in Washington.

The American Government unit will be divided into 12 major divisions, corresponding generally to the Ministries of the German Central Government.

General Eisenhower will be the U.S. representative on the Four-Power Control Council, as agreed at Yalta, with Lieut.-General Lucius Clay as his deputy, as well as Deputy Military Governor for Germany.

The War Department added:—"U.S. Army, Navy and Air Forces have perfected, over a period of many months, and in co-ordination with the British, Russians and French, a programme to impose a stern Military Government all over Germany and to carry out the policies agreed on at Yalta.

"The public information section will control all forms of public expression, including newspapers, radio, magazines and films, and will deal with the dissolution of Goebbels's Propaganda Ministry and the establishment of an unbiassed and truthful Press and radio system.

"The three military divisions will deal with the demobilisation of the German armed forces and disarmament."

An Allied token force of British and Americans is being prepared to go to Berlin as soon as arrangements with the Russians have been completed, it was announced in Paris yesterday.

Brigadier Hilton, Chief of the Allied Military Mission to Norway, announced yesterday that the Russians will occupy only the northern part of Norway, which they already hold, and will leave the rest to the British and Americans. This is in accordance with the demarcation line agreed between the British, American, Soviet and Norwegian Governments.

Members of the Nazi Party, Gestapo men, German Secret Service officers, political suspects, and Allied nationals, believed to have collaborated with the Germans, are included in 2,000 arrests made by the legal section of General Dempsey's Military Government. Kramer, Commandant of the Belsen Concentration Camp, and guards from the camp, were among those arrested.

PRAGUE FIGHTING

"Pockets" of German-held territory continue to dwindle, states Reuter. All German garrisons—some 20,000 men—in the Dodecanese Islands, in the Ægean, have surrendered, and the "non-surrender" Germans in Czechoslovakia are being subjected to increased pressure.

With the exception of isolated snipers, there is no German resistance in Prague, said Prague radio. "The liberation of the remaining part of Bohemia is also progressing swiftly," it added. The Germans have been withdrawing the major part of their forces in the direction of Pilsen, home of the Skoda armaments works, which is in American hands.

The most troublesome groups are north and east of Prague, where they have dug in around the mountain towns and easily defended hill positions. Although the Germans have no line or front, they have several hundred tanks as well as ammunition, and are giving considerable trouble.—(A.P.)

The Red Army High Command has despatched two of its toughest tank commanders, Colonel-General Leliushenko and Colonel-General Rybalkd, to deal with opposition in Czechoslovakia and parts of Austria, states an Associated Press message from Moscow.

HENLEIN'S SUICIDE

Konrad Henlein, one time leader of the Sudeten German supporters of the Nazis, who was captured by the Americans, has killed himself in a prisoner-of-war cage. He was sentenced to death by the Czechs in 1938.

Yugoslav partisans, moving into Southern Carinthia and Styria, in an apparent attempt to claim parts of the two provinces for General Tito, set up a block on one main road on Thursday, forcing the 8th Army to redirect traffic for a time.

Fourteen U-Boats In British Harbours

Up to a late hour last night nine U-boats had surrendered in British harbours. Another two were approaching Loch Erriboll, on the north coast of Sutherlandshire, to give themselves up, and two others were nearing Londonderry. Yesterday's "bag" was swelled by the arrival of two in Loch Alsh.

With late arrivals, the totals will be:—Loch Erriboll, 8; Weymouth, 2; Londonderry, 2; Loch Alsh, 2.

R.A.F. Coastal Command aircraft are escorting surrendering U-boats, states the Air Ministry News Service. A large number of U-boats have now flashed "surrender signals," but not all the submarines are accessible to Coastal Command aircraft.

German Prisoners To See Atrocity Films

The U.S. Army authorities are insisting that every German prisoner in the United States should see films depicting the atrocities in Nazi concentration camps. Booklets of pictures showing details of the Nazi mass murder "assembly lines" will also be distributed in prison camps.—(A.P.)

Mines Off Wexford

MASTERS of ships and others are warned that a number of drifting mines were observed yesterday off the coast of Wexford, says a notice from the Department of Industry and Commerce.

SEVEN V.C.s WON BY IRISHMEN

UP to November last volunteers from Eire serving with the British forces had won 314 decorations for bravery. These included seven Victoria Crosses, which were won by:—

Captain Edward Stephen Fogarty Fegen, R.N., Ballinunty, Co. Tipperary, who, in 1940, saved a convoy by attacking an enemy cruiser with his ship, the armed merchantman, Jervis Bay. He went down with his ship. He was the third Irishman to win the V.C. in this war.

Lieutenant-Commander Eugene Esmonde, D.S.O., Dominagh, Lough Derg, killed in action in 1942 when challenging hopeless odds to attack the German battle cruisers Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, and the cruiser Prinz Eugen.

Major Harold Marcus Ervine-Andrews, East Lancs. Regiment, Co. Wexford, one of the first two Army V.C.s of the war—Dunkirk, May, 1940.

Captain J. J. B. Jackman, Northumberland Fusiliers, Dun Laoghaire—El Duda, November, 1941. He was killed in action.

Lance-Corporal John Patrick Keneally, Irish Guards, Tipperary—Tunisia, 1943.

Private Richard Kelliher, Australian Military Forces, Ballybeggan, Tralee — New Guinea, September, 1943.

Flying-Officer Donald Edward Garland, award the first Victoria Cross in the R.A.F. He was born at Ballinacor, Wicklow, in 1918—France, June, 1940.

The George Cross was won by Corporal James Scully, Crumlin, Dublin. Pioneer Corps—Merseyside, 1941.

One of the greatest fighters in the R.A.F., commander of a wing at the age of 21 years, was Paddy Finucane, D.S.O., D.F.C., of Dublin, who was killed in action with, at least, 20 enemy aircraft to his credit.

Appeal to Trade Unions

An appeal "to the small number of seceding unions to think seriously before taking the course along which they were being pushed for purposes which had not the interests of the workers as their objective," was made in a resolution passed at the special conference of trade unions and trade councils affiliated to the Irish Trades Union Congress, held in Dublin yesterday.

The conference condemned and deplored the misguided action of the officials of the small number of unions in seeking to set up a rival minority organisation to the all-Ireland Irish Trade Union Congress, which had functioned in national and international affairs as the representative authority of the organised workers of Ireland for over fifty years."

The places of Mr. William O'Brien, General Secretary of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union; Senator Thomas Kennedy, General President of the same union; Mr. W. McMullen, vice-President; Senator S. Campbell, Treasurer of the Dublin Typographical Society, and M. Drumgoole, Irish Union of Distributive Workers' Union, have been filled by the following elections to the National Executive:—Messrs. J. T. O'Farrell, Railway Clerks' Association; J. Larkin, T.D., Workers' Union of Ireland; Frank Foley, Irish Municipal Employees' Trade Union; J. O'Keefe, National League of the Blind, and Miss Louie Bennett, Irish Women Workers' Union.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK

Scattered Treasures

Dismembered Masterpieces. By Thomas Bodkin. Collins. 12/6 net.

By A. J. Leventhal

THE title of this book is likely to give an erroneous impression. The dismembered masterpiece immediately calls to mind the Victory from Samothrace, which used to throne headless in the Louvre, or the Venus de Milo, in the same museum, where numberless sightseers admired her armless torso. The incompleteness of these statues is due, of course, to the number of fragments available for their reconstruction. In the latter case, fragments collected from Melos were skilfully patched together by astute restorers to give us the Aphrodite, which was accepted as one of the great examples of Greek idealistic sculpture, made fashionable by Winckelmann in the eighteenth century, and which has been accepted generally until Wilenski voiced the modern sneer against the academic propagandists of classical beauty. When this statue was reconstructed, incompleteness was as much the mode as it is now in painting; so much so that the offer of two arms, found in the same place as the other fragments, was refused.

Art and Conscience

These matters, however, are not Dr. Bodkin's concern. His work is a plea to the Governments of the world, to the directors of museums and galleries, to examine first their art treasures and then their consciences. Loot consequent on wars, vandalism, personal greed and national pride have throughout the centuries scattered and dismembered masterpieces of art. It seems ridiculous that the Pheidian head of the Lemnian Athena should be housed at Bologna whilst her body lies decapitated in Dresden. It is monstrous that two cities in Europe should each boast of the possession of a monstrosity, that national pride should perpetuate a sculptural cleavage which goodwill and a sense of the universality of art could easily remedy. Experts could fit the head to its rightful body, but there is no international body to make the galleries concerned give up the parts they hold.

Italian Paintings

The London exhibition of Italian paintings in 1930 reminded many connoisseurs that numerous Italian masterpieces exist dismembered and scattered all over the world. Here was an opportunity for temporary reconstruction of many important works. The display in alignment of the five pictures which composed the predella of the altar-piece by Domenico Veneziano for the Church of Santa Lucia de Magnioli made their relationship, formerly only conjectured, abundantly clear. A contribution from the Dublin National Gallery to this exhibition was Fra Angelico's panel of Saints Cosmas and Damien. Dr. Bodkin has established that its description in the commemorative catalogue, as being one of eight panels which originally composed the predella of Angelico's altar-piece in his own monastery of San Marco, is incorrect. Measurements show that this number should be six, three of which are in Munich, one in the Louvre and one in Florence. "It is to be hoped," says Dr. Bodkin, "that Ireland, France, Germany and Italy will some day arrange to re-unite the predella pictures of Fra Angelico's altar-piece, preferably below the altar-piece itself."

Put Asunder

Dr. Bodkin deals also with mutilations by unscrupulous dealers. He indicates paintings which have been cut into two or more parts in order that a number of pictures by the same artist may be marketed instead of one single work, with consequently greater profit. The author laments a more sentimental separation evidenced by the splitting of pairs of paintings. Here he apportions the blame to auctioneers mainly. Husbands and wives painted to hang together by Reynolds, Gainsborough or Romney have been parted. The spouses languish solitarily in obscure English collections while their wives flaunt their beauty in American country houses at Miami. This is explained by the general preference by purchasers for portraits of women, for which they are prepared to pay higher prices. In the National Gallery in Dublin we have a portrait of Anton Hundertpfund, painted by Wolfgang Huber in 1528, but his wife, Margaret, by the same artist, has found her way to America. Dr. Bodkin reproduces both portraits, and their juxtaposition shows how grievous a wrong, aesthetically, their separation is.

Manuscripts

Time's fragmentation bombing is not restricted to the Fine Arts; it has dealt hardly with many important manuscripts. The famous Codex Sinaiticus has its main text in the British Museum, but this is bound without forty-three leaves, which remain in Leipzig. The Book of Lecan, in the library of the Royal Irish Academy, Dr. Bodkin reminds us, lacks nine leaves, which are bound with other MSS. in the Trinity College Library. A note in the Catalogue of MSS. of T.C.D. makes another of those stories which fiction writers would avoid because of its improbability. It appears that the great Book of Lecan was in that library in 1688, when the first extant catalogue was compiled. At that time nine leaves were wanting. When the soldiery of James the Second barracked themselves in the College Chapel and confusion reigned in the College generally, it seems to have been carried off to France. In 1787, through the Abbé Kearney, of Paris, it was presented to the then recently-founded Royal Irish Academy, where it now remains. By a singular fate, however, the nine leaves which were missing in 1688 have found their way to the shelves where the remainder of the book formerly stood. It would seem that a little goodwill could mend this unnecessary cleavage, as well as the separation of the eleven leaves of the Book of Leinster, which are in the Franciscan Monastery in Merchant's quay, while the rest of the book lies incomplete in the T.C.D. Library.

Dr. Bodkin's plea for an international scheme to right as many of these wrongs as may be possible is well timed. His points are made with scholarly impartiality and artistic sensibility. His book is not for the expert only, but for all interested in art and justice. The illustrations are not only valuable as being complementary to his argument, but intrinsically so.

Some Predecessors of "T.C.D."

By Seumas O'Sullivan

IN October, 1857, Messrs. Wm. Magee and Co. published, at 18 Nassau street, Dublin, the first number of a magazine entitled The College Magazine, conducted by Members of The University of Dublin, a sub-title which recalls that of Hermathena, "By Members of Trinity College, Dublin."

The College Magazine was issued in buff covers, 8vo, and with the 6th issue, in March, 1858, it ceased publication. It is, I think, generally known that the editor was the Rev. C. P. Mulvany, who, according to O'Donoghue, was "sent to T.C.D. at an early age." He also, according to O'Donoghue, contributed to The Nation over the signature "C.P.M.Sch." and to the Irish Metropolitan Magazine. It is, however, quite certain that he was a frequent contributor to Kottabos until, in 1872, he went to Canada. He was the author of several works of an historical nature, including "A History of the North-west Rebellion of 1885" and "A History of Canadian Liberalism," a book on which he was at work at the time of his death in 1885. He also published a book of verses, "Lyrics of History and Life," some of which appeared for the first time in the pages of the College Magazine.

Contributors

As all of the contributors to this magazine preserved a strict anonymity, or used initials only, it may be of interest to give here a complete list of their names. I quote from a MS. list which I found in a copy of the sixth and last number. They were:—Robertson, Mulvany, Moeran, T. E. Webb, McGuire, S. Fitzgibbon, R. Gwynn, W. A. Mayne, Mrs. Addey, Wm. Brooke, E. T. Wright, Stopford Brooke, C. Arnold, Lecky, Stokes, McManus, R. Hannay, Dr. Egan, R. MacDonald, Mrs. Ferris, G. F. Shaw, Wilson Johnson, Foster, P. A. E. Singer, Woodroofe and R. W. Buckley. The sole contribution by Lecky is of considerable interest, as it is probably his earliest contribution to any publication. It is a poem of two four-lined stanzas, and is entitled "The Cloud":

How silently yon milk-white cloud
Is gliding overhead,
As though above life's busy crowd
It bore the silent dead.

And now its snowy wings expand,
And now again they're furled,
As though that happy spirit band
Just saw, and fled the world.

The contributions by R. Gwynn—which are mostly derived from Oriental sources—have a curious interest for their similarity to famous "Dream of Ravan," which was first printed in the Dublin University Magazine. 1853 and 1854. The name of the writer has not been—as far as I know—hitherto discovered, and I hope that some scholar will consider it worth while to investigate the comparison which I have suggested, and give us some indication—or better still, some evidence — concerning the authorship of that really great piece of work; for, as Dr. Mead states in his introduction to the 1895 reprint of the "Dream," the writer "was both a scholar and a mystic."

Stopford Brooke

Stopford Brooke's only contribution is a long article, "Modern Ideas versus Ancient," and this, too, is of interest, for it was published a year after he had graduated in his 25th year and is certainly amongst the earliest specimens of his writing. The articles are, for the most part, of a fairly high standard of scholarship, and, in their general tone, somewhat similar to those of the earlier volumes of the Dublin University Magazine; but in one sense the College Magazine hardly deserves its title; for, with the sole exception of a single page entitled "University Intelligence," which will be found at the end of the second number, it gives us but little information concerning the activities of the College which it professes to represent.

In 1869 Trinity College gave birth to a publication of a very different kind; for in that year Professor Tyrrell issued the first number of Kottabos. This does not come within the scope of the present note, but I hope that before very long some good bookman will disentangle for us the rather complicated threads of its existence from its foundation to its cessation in 1895.

The "Review"

The year 1873 witnessed the production of another publication within the walls of Trinity, and Hermathena, which, happily, is still with us, saw the light. This, like Kottabos, is far outside the scope of this fragmentary note, but in February, 1885, some of the writers for Kottabos transferred their services from Kottabos, which for some reason had ceased to appear, to the newly-founded Dublin University Review, a magazine which could, and did, at last claim to represent Trinity, and to provide (I quote from its introductory announcement) "some outlet for the intellectual activity of its students and graduates, and at the same time help to direct and develop the educated opinion of Dublin, and, indeed, we may say, of all Ireland."

The new magazine had a truly auspicious entry, for the first number appeared in a quarto format with a chaste light blue wrapper, bearing at the top of the page the arms of Trinity College, and is, I think, in appearance, one of the most pleasing of Irish magazines. The following six numbers—also in 4to form—are stated, some of the contributors to Kottabos transferred their writing during the temporary cessation of that journal, we get Tyrrell's magnificent sonnet on the death of Major Burnaby, and also a delicious rendering into Latin of the Limerick, "There was an old man from the North," from the same hand, and a neat translation of Locker's lines on Mrs. Grundy. This is signed with the initial "O," and it may be worth noting that this same issue of the magazine contains a report of Wilde's lectures which were given at the Gaiety Theatre in this year. In addition to the items mentioned, we are given four and a half pages of University news dealing with the various activities of the College.

Poems by Yeats

The second number is in every way worthy of its new and handsome cover, for it contains in its Kottabistic section, which has now expanded to almost two pages, two early lyrics, "Song of the Faeries" and "Voices," by W. B. Yeats, and among the prose contributions are two essays on Berkeley, by J. H. Bernard and Prof. Maguire; "The Quatrains of Omar Khayyam," by T. W. Lyster, and an article on "Time," by Rambaut. In this month, too, appeared the special Art Supplement of the Review, a fine piece of work, containing reproductions of the principal pictures at the Royal Hibernian Academy's Exhibition. A second Art Supplement was issued in 1886 in 8vo form, Although these quarto numbers of the Review have now become exceedingly rare, and are seldom to be found in good condition, they can, of course, be obtained in the National Library and in other libraries, and it will be unnecessary for me to do more than refer to some of the outstanding features which are to be found in its pages.

For students of W. B. Yeats's work—particularly of his earliest work—it will offer much of interest. Here, for instance, we find his first verse play, "The Island of Statues," in its complete form. It runs through four numbers—April, May, June and July, 1885. These four copies which are before me as I write, have been bound together in a cloth binding, and bear the autograph "W. B. Yeats" on the inside of the front cover, and also his note "Island of Statues, pages 56, 82, 110, 136." "Love and Death, page 93." This poem, "Love and Death," does not, I think, appear in any edition of the poet's works.

Alterations

Mr. Wade, in his Bibliography of Yeats, 1908, is wrong in stating that "The Island of Statues" was reprinted in 'The Wanderings of Oisin'," for the play, as published in the Review, contains two acts of three scenes each, whereas the "Wanderings of Oisin" reprints only a single scene (Act 2, sc. 3). This scene contains the lyric "Voices" which appeared in the March issue of the Review, and another lyric, "Song of the Faeries," from the same number. In this latter poem, as reprinted in the volume, the first line is changed from the original version, "A man has a hope for heaven" to "A man has the fields of heaven." In the copy of this number before me, which, as I have stated, bears the autograph of Yeats, the poet has made the alteration in ink—a fact which proves that as early as 1885 he had developed that habit of rewriting which he continued to the end of his life. The last four numbers of the 4to series contain many other articles and poems which would well repay a disinterment, but it would lengthen the notes unnecessarily to list them here.

With the publication of the August number the Review adopted, as I have stated, its 8vo form and changed its wrappers from blue to a creamy white. It still retained, however, in a somewhat reduced and altered form, the Celtic design, and the arms of the College still held their position in the left-hand corner.

But although its vestment was somewhat less resplendent than its original one, and its size diminished, the Review—in respect of its contents—went on from strength to strength. Its list of contributors from August, 1885, to its last number, in June, 1887, contains the names of the most noted Irish writers of that time—Standish O'Grady, Edward Dowden, Justin MacCarthy, Michael Davitt, Bastable, Todhunter, Alfred Webb, Douglas Hyde, John F. Taylor, T. W. Rolleston, Jane Barlow, Katherine Tynan, and of course, W. B. Yeats, whose contributions have been more or less accurately listed by Alan Wade and others. His most important was the verse play "Mosada," which appeared in the number for June, 1886, and was in the same year reprinted from the standing type, in pamphlet form, and with the addition of a portrait of the poet by his father, John B. Yeats. In the November issue we find his essay on Sir Samuel Ferguson, and in the February number an item of very special interest. It is entitled "Life," and consists of five stanzas. Of these the first and fifth were afterwards reprinted, in an altered version, in "The Wanderings of Oisin" (1889). The second, third and fourth have not—as far as I know—been printed elsewhere.

With the publication of the first 8vo number in August, 1885, the title of the section which in the 4to series had been "Kottabistic," was changed to "Kottabos." In the number for December, 1885, this section contained a translation from Theocritus by Keningale Cook, and rumour has it that exception was taken to the "freedom" of some of its lines by some college censor. I cannot vouch for the truth of this legend, but with the publication of this December number the section entitled "Kottabos" ceased to appear, and on the cover of the issue of January, 1886, the arms of the City of Dublin were substituted for those of Trinity College. This change did not in any way interfere with the success of the magazine, for, as I have said, it grew better and better with every number. And then, with its issue of June, 1887, and without any warning to its readers, it ceased publication.

POEM FROM NEW ROSS

By VALENTIN IREMONGER

IN this quiet town it is odd to discover
A day buried so deeply in the debris of years
And to dig it out, not damaged at all, discoloured
With dust to be wiped away like tears.
Why here, of all places? Was it the fall
Of sunlight on the trees beyond or the startling call
Of a trumpet unexpectedly down the street, lay
Flush with the memory and pathos of that day?

Say, anyhow, it was: for love like trumpets then
Shattered the walls of our reserve in a sunlit garden
When, over the hedge, you threw the cherries to me and again
Innocence gave us a blessing and a pardon
As little we thought of the fleet, disturbing swallow
Along airlines in the garden skidding, stuttering its warning
Of night over the horizon implacably throbbing
With answers both for our laughing and our sobbing.

O Elizabeth, the gold trumpets no more
Curl for you their notes, though the cherry-tree
Each year displays its wares in hope
Your fingers will fondle them caressingly:
And here is my youth, like a bright ribbon, soiled
By death, my days, the dustbin gang, the broken delph, destroyed
By hopes that leave like visitors and leave
A trail of stains that smiling won't conceal.

Yet now, watching the swallows bank over the trees
There where the river bends, suddenly I find time to wonder
What can stop the cough in my life or ease
The choking effects of so many blunders—
Somewhere there should be love aloud like music.
Over the hunching hills, the wires go trailing their furious
Messages, the oiled machinery of nature shunts
Day down for repairs. Silently, the night's technicians hunt.

The Negro Napoleon

Citizen Toussaint. By Ralph Korngold. Gollancz. 7/6 net.

TOUSSAINT LOUVERTURE, born a negro slave in Haiti, is unquestionably one of the greatest men of negro race in history. As a military strategist he held his own, not merely with British and Spanish generals, but also with some of the more distinguished of Napoleon's subordinates. Many were the French reputations lost in the struggle between black and white in the West Indies, and great as Toussaint showed himself in war, he was little less distinguished in peace. His moderation in victory and his complete lack of bitterness in face of much provocation are among the traits which have brought him an enviable renown, and all must admire the capacity of his well-nigh illiterate slave followers to organise and discipline a more than competent army. Toussaint was not averse to co-operation with white ability, and the lasting loyalty and friendship of white officers is the noblest tribute to his inspiring genius.

In Mr. Korngold this heroic figure, even despite the comparative unimportance of his historical background, has found a sympathetic and enthusiastic biographer. No one can put down this interesting volume without admiration for its subject, sympathy with the aims he fought for, and contempt for the treatment he suffered. The negro Napoleon from the military point of view deserves well his title; from the moral and social viewpoint he is infinitely Napoleon's superior.

Montgomery

Montgomery. By Michael C. McGill and William D. Flackes. The Quota Press. 5/- net.

THIS is a work of provincial piety, written with the journalistic flair for expression, and with the minimum of factual information. The distinguished Ulster Field-Marshal whom Sir James Grigg has called "the greatest British soldier since Wellington," had lived the life of a typical army officer until a chapter of accidents gave him the chance to seize one of the great opportunities of history. Grandson of the author of "Eric; or Little by Little," and son of a colonial bishop, the young Montgomery was brought up in an atmosphere of stern Victorian piety, sincere good works, and happy youthful exhuberance. Possessed of that deeply religious strain which has been a guiding force to so many great military commanders, he has all the stern, unrelenting qualities associated with his Scots ancestors, together with some of those showier attributes which are the characteristic of the Irish abroad. This is a sympathetic sketch of no great strategical importance.

Fiction and Fact

The Rags of Time. By Francis Dale. Hurst and Blackett. 8/6 net.

AT the turn of the century, a young man escaped from the stricture of a Victorian home to pursue his ambitions as an actor. Geoffrey Trent joins a "fit-up" company, composed of experienced but destitute actors. Miss Dale has captured with considerable success the atmosphere of the small Victorian theatres, the poverty and sordidness of the low theatrical boarding-house. She is less happy with her characters, aiming at a Dickensian quality, which does not quite come off. On the whole, however, "The Rags of Time" is entertaining reading.

When the Weather's Changing. By Jean Howard. Putnam. 7/6 net.

This is Miss Howard's first novel, although she is becoming well known as a short-story writer. In it she presents a complicated pattern, with her story happening at several levels—the struggle of farming in war-time conditions, the conflict in the village between old petty rivalries and new requirements, and, in the foreground, the personal problems of her heroine, a city intellectual, married to a young farmer—all set against the background of the seasonal changes of the year. Unfortunately, Miss Howard does not quite achieve her intention, and the levels of her story never completely cohere. But there is much of interest in this book, particularly to lovers of country life.

The Laughter of My Father. By Carlos Bulosan. Michael Joseph. 7/6 net.

Many of Mr. Bulosan's anecdotes of his father and his family in the rural Philippines appeared in The New Yorker, which should be recommendation enough for any collection of sketches. But apparently that brilliant weekly nods, too, for, read en masse, this slight autobiography is almost unfinishable. Mr. Bulosan has attempted one of the most difficult of modern short-story fashions, and it is, perhaps, not to be wondered at that his style is occasionally self-conscious and forcedly naïve. However, some of the stories are undoubtedly amusing, and the casual reader may find the authentic pictures of a primitive life entertaining.

TELL-TALE LIGHTS

IT is nearing eleven o'clock. Lights are still burning deep in the recesses behind that great semi-circular window which marks the home of O'K-B.

At a desk, surrounded by sheets of paper, a man sits with furrowed brows. The ash tray in front of him is filled with stubbed cigarettes. Nearby another man stands critically before a half-finished drawing . . . from a little way off come the busy tap—tap—tap of a typewriter.

Work is in progress. Urgent work. New advertisements are being born.

To-day or to-morrow you may be reading these advertisements. They will convey no hint of the time and thought, the long hours, the wrestling with ideas, which have gone into their making. They would be poor advertisements if they did. But they may make you want to buy what they advertise. That is their justification. That is our recompense for busy days and busy nights.

The Irish Times

SATURDAY, MAY 12, 1945.

OUT OF THE SHADOWS

The announcement that the Government had decided to abolish the censorship of newspapers came to us last night as a complete—indeed, as an almost overwhelming—surprise. Yesterday we appealed to Mr. de Valera to put an end to this sorry business as quickly as possible; but we had no idea that he would act so promptly! For the moment, we find ourselves in a position of some embarrassment. We feel as anybody must feel who, having been confined in a dark cell for nearly six years, is released suddenly into the sunshine and blinded by the light. For that reason we shall confine our immediate comments to a few general remarks. Ever since the war broke out, the Irish newspapers have been subjected to an official discipline, in some respects as Draconian and irrational as anything that ever was devised in the fertile brain of the late Josef Goebbels. This newspaper was singled out for particular attention. Its views already were well known. For years before the war we had made no secret of our hatred and contempt for the foul growths of Fascism and National Socialism that were stifling all freedom of thought and decency of living in the countries of their origin. Throughout the Spanish Civil War we raised our voice, small and impotent as it may have been, in defence of democracy's fundamental principles, and in fearful protest against the inroads that were being made on the liberties of the human race. We were, as we still are, pro-British, inasmuch as we believed, and continue to believe, that the system of democracy which exists throughout the British Commonwealth represents, for all its faults, the highest achievement that yet has been made by man as a political being. We respected, and acquiesced in, the Irish Government's policy of neutrality. Nevertheless, our sympathies from the start were with the opponents of tyranny and injustice; and our fervent prayer for long years of mental torture was that, in the fulness of time, God, in His goodness, would give final victory to Allied arms. Throughout those horrifying years, the Irish Times was forbidden to express, or even to hint at, its convictions. The censorship had plenary powers which it always was ready to employ.

We have been living and working in conditions of unspeakable humiliation; and if at times we have been forced to bow ourselves in the house of Rimmon, our compliance with orders which we have regarded as almost savagely unjust has been due to the fact that this newspaper is the property of a limited company with a very large number of shareholders, many of whom depend upon the dividends that they receive from the firm. It is difficult—indeed, it is impossible—to write with moderation about the treatment which this newspaper has received from the censorship during recent years. Alone among the Dublin dailies, we have been compelled to submit to the autocrats of Dublin Castle every line that we proposed to print, from the leading article down to the humblest prepaid advertisement. We always were careful to say nothing that might prejudice either the Government's policy of neutrality or the maintenance of public order; yet it was seldom, indeed, that our leading articles were not hacked and mutilated in such a way as to make them almost meaningless. Shoals of letters have reached this office from time to time accusing us of pro-Axis leanings; obviously, the writers had no conception of the way in which our mouths were muzzled. Now, thank God, the censorship is gone. In fairness to the Taoiseach, we do not believe that he ever realised the extent to which its powers were abused. At any rate, we, in common with all democratic and freedom-loving citizens, are grateful to him now for his decision to discard this ugliest and most dangerous of all political weapons. Some time must pass before Irish journalists will be able to accustom themselves again to that freedom of expression which has been smothered for so long. In the meantime, let us rejoice that our time of tribulation is at an end. This is a proud day not only for the newspapers, but also for the Irish nation.

Petrol

The forthcoming restoration of the basic petrol ration for private cars and motor cycles in Britain has been announced by Mr. Churchill; it is to take place within thirty days. Naturally, the allowance for private users will be small. Huge quantities of petrol will continue to be needed, as Mr. Churchill pointed out, for the prosecution of the war in the Far East, and for the solution of Europe's transport problems; after them, public transport has first claim on additional supplies. The private motorist will have at his disposal only about enough fuel for 100 miles of motoring a month. Larger rations will be available for taxis and delivery vehicles, and for people who need their cars for professional reasons. It is difficult to say what hope this announcement offers of an early resumption of the basic ration in this country. Europe and the Pacific war cannot be stinted; and, while it may be true that, in the interests of the motor trade in general, every effort will be made to hasten the return of private motoring, Irish car-owners ought not to be unduly optimistic. Here, as in England, public transport will have to receive the first consideration. Taxi and hackney owners also will have a strong claim for priority; and here one must hope that, as their petrol allowance increases, the first opportunity will be taken to revoke the Emergency Order by which they are allowed to charge double fare. It is reasonable that, when the taxi driver is limited by a small petrol ration, he should have a larger margin of profit to enable him to live. As his turnover increases, however, the right of the passenger to cheap transport reasserts itself. Private motorists, apart from those who require cars for business reasons, will come at the end of the list. One must hope that, when they are enabled to take their cars out again, they will remember that they themselves and other road-users are out of practice. Unless every driver takes the greatest care, the return of the private car may be marked by a melancholy series of accidents, rather than by joy and gratitude.

OPERATIC CONTEST AT FEIS CEOIL

THE Feis Ceoil closed on an exciting note last night, when the Metropolitan Hall was filled for the contest for the Dramatic Cup for operatic solo singing in costume. There were 41 entries, the winner being John R. Callanan, a Dublin baritone who has appeared in many of the Old Belvedere Musical Society's stage presentations. Last year's winner, Miss Phyllis Boland, ran him close for honours and was very highly commended for her singing of "Titania I Am" from "Mignon." Results:—

Dramatic Cup (operatic solo in costume)—Won by John R. Callanan, Morven, Ballymun road, Dublin; v.h.c.—Phyllis Boland, 308 Harold's Cross road, Dublin, and Laura Macari, 46 Harrington street, Dublin.

Mr. Steuart Wilson, who adjudicated, said that the winner, who had sung "Largo al Factotum," from "The Barber of Seville," had not a great voice, but had absolute freedom and control of himself on the stage.

Junior Piano (under eleven)—1, Barbara Robinson, 137 Kimmage road, East, Terenure, Dublin; 2, Anne Mullins, Cork.

Traditional Fiddle (senior)—1, Desmond Carty, Main street, Tallaght; 2, Leo Lehmann, 191 South Circular road, Dublin. Ditto (junior)—1, Michedl Og MacAodhagáin, Ballinasloe; 2, Julia McBride, Kells.

Denis O'Sullivan Medal (two Irish songs)—Won by Tomas O Súilleabháin, Ardee road, Rathmines.

Adjudicating, Mr. Dawson Freer urged singers to cultivate breath control and forgetfulness of their audience. These were the hallmarks of the good singer. He expressed the hope that the winner would go from strength to strength.

John McCormack Cup (confined to gold medal winners in the solo soprano, mezzo-soprano, contralto, tenor, baritone and bass competitions this year)—Won by Joan Walker, Dufferin avenue, Dublin (mezzo-soprano); runner-up, James McKenna, Belfast (tenor).

Mr. Steuart Wilson, who adjudicated with Mr. Dawson Freer, said that the winner was obviously extremely musical. She was very self-possessed, and sang with complete command of detail; her intonation was never at fault.

Junior Organ—1, James D. Beardsley, East Wall road, Dublin; 2, W. F. Westbury, Mountjoy School, Dublin. Senior Organ—1, Dorothy A. Graham, Inverness road, Fairview; 2, Cecilia C. Doyle, The Bungalow, Upper Grace Park road, Drumcondra.

Dr. W. H. Harris, adjudicating, expressed disappointment with the sight reading in the senior class.

FitzGerald Trophy (Advanced Organ)—Won by J. S. Beckett, Drummany, Greystones, Wicklow; h.c., Alfred Burrowes, Muskerry, Clonkeen road, Dean's Grange. Bach Prize (Organ)—No award.

Clyde Twelvetrees Cup (Advanced 'Cello)—Won by Betty Sullivan, Tempe terrace, Dalkey, Co. Dublin.

Senior Violin—1, David E. Lillis, King's Hospital, Dublin; 2, Máire Ní h-Eiseamaigh, Highfield road, Dublin. Mr. Henry Holst, adjudicating, said that the winner was a young player of great promise.

Piano and 'Cello Duet—1 (Eisner Cup), Stella MacNevin and Moilie Concannon, Kenilworth square, Dublin; 2, Elmie Lang and Cecilia Doyle, Villiers road, Dublin. Mr. Holst said that both pairs were good, but the winners had given a much fresher and more real performance.

THE T.C.D. EPISODE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Let us not lose all sense of proportion. Weigh an unpremeditated act of bravado by an excited schoolboy who ought to have known better, over against that moral horror—a visit of condolence on the death of Nero.—Yours, etc.,

"CATO."

Dublin, May 10th, 1945.

PEACE CELEBRATIONS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Is there any official explanation as to why there were no public celebrations in this country on the occasion of the end of the war in Europe? We had been constantly reminded by Mr. de Valera that "until the last shot was fired" in Europe, this country was in grave danger, and a state of emergency existed.

One would imagine that the passing of this emergency, which dogged our footsteps for so long a time and affected the whole life of the country, would call for public rejoicing and thanksgiving. — Yours, etc.,

G.H.J.

Drogheda, May 9th, 1945.

DR. RAYMOND MAGNER

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—We have been instructed by Dr. Ray Magner to state publicly that persistent rumours have been circulated to the effect that the shooting was due to the fact he was concerned in the occurrences which took place at Trinity College on Monday, 7th inst., and that these rumours are absolutely untrue and without foundation.

We have to point out that Dr. Magner did not arrive in Dublin until 7.25 p.m. on Monday, 7th inst., on the Belfast-Dublin train, and therefore could not possibly have been concerned in these incidents.

It is hoped that no further steps will have to be taken to prevent repetition of these rumours. —Yours, etc.,

DUBLIN BAY DROWNING

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—The circumstances of the fatality in the mouth of the Liffey on April 29th, in which my brother, Dermot, and Mr. Healy were lost, appears to call for an inquiry into the organisation of the Dublin Bay rescue service.

It appears that their sailing dinghy got into difficulties within sight of the lighthouse keepers at Poolbeg, who saw the men in the water clinging to the capsized boat. The lighthouse personnel could render no effective assistance because they are not on the telephone, nor have they a suitable boat. I am informed that they sent a radio telephone message which was not picked up by the Port Control.

The lifeboat at Dun Laoghaire could not put out because it was under repair, and press reports state that the Howth lifeboat returned because it picked up a small craft in difficulties.

Making full allowance for exceptional circumstances, one cannot help feeling that there appears to have been a grave lack of responsible direction and control in the situation. Two men were lost within sight of shore, and no really effective attempt at rescue was possible. As the situation could be repeated, it is in the public interest that the circumstances of this tragedy should be closely investigated.—Yours, etc.,

S. B. MORGAN.

By Myles na gCopaleen

YESTERDAY, sitting as County Minister and Ghoul Lighter in Ordinary for Dublin Town and Environs, I had under consideration certain dossiers from the Sûreté, Ireland Yard, dealing with the perforation of glazed cultural and other fenestrations by missiles not illapidate; and dealing also with missilaneous matters arising therefrom, not excluding the ceremonial hoisting, dehoisting, and incineration of chauvin insignia, acts reputedly performed by a person or persons uninishowen. I have directed that the matter should be again brought to the notice of My Grace when I have become sober but certain remarks I must and shall here and now make all the censorships in the world notwithstanding.

It is my view that the status of Trinity College, Dublin, should be more particularly defined. Too long have we been content with the dumb sanctions of custom and usage. When the rabblement offered discourtesies to the buildings housing the representatives of friendly Powers, your Minister for External Affairs very properly expressed to these Governments the regret of your Irish State. Note that the same procedure was followed when the Government of Trinity College conceived that there was occasion to express regret to your Irish Government. The Provost called upon your Minister for External Affairs. I applaud these manifestations of etiquette.

Better, go up in an aeroplane—it is dangerous to go up without one—and eye the physical lineaments of this College. Of what does it remind you? Nothing, surely, if not the Vatican. It may not now be fashionable to mention many of the fine things Mussolini did for Italy in his earlier heyday but surely his creation of the Vatican State, the equilibrium he contrived as between Church and State—was not that a good thing? I earnestly counsel the wise and thoughtful men who form your Government to place on a more explicit basis the admitted extra-territoriality that Trinity College has long enjoyed. Give Trinity independence!. Devise a separate Trinity citizenship! Let there be there the right of sanctuary, an honourable customs barrier, a distinct nationality! It could be done, mind you. It would involve, of course, the opening of an Irish Embassy (with possibly British, American, etc., embassies) within the College State and the opening of a Trinity Government Embassy in Paris—perhaps Dartry Hall (in the Southern redoubt) would be a good place. And, of course, the Vatican State would be entitled to diplomatic representation.

Of my other proposal—that the Irish Times, which is a constituent college of Dublin University, should also be given independence—it is perhaps premature to speak. Nor do I mention the affront offered to my own person not a month of moons ago. I do not refer to the stones with which some disaffected ruffians struck and fractured our honourable windows. I do say that for two evenings running I waited in until after six expecting—for was it not the most natural thing in the world?—a certain call. In vain, however, I do not apportion blame, will at this stage say nothing that might exacerbate wounded feelings. But Sir John, David and I thought it very . . . . very . . . . odd.

Copernicus May Carry His Penalty to Success

By BIRDCATCHER

MOST valuable event at Windsor to-day is the Robert Wilmot Handicap (1¼m.), which will bring out a number of useful performers, including Covenant, Copernicus, Star Lover, Pinch of Heaven and Filius. The last-named, with the allowance being claimed, should go close. Star Lover, Covenant and Pinch of Heaven are closely handicapped on recent running. Copernicus shoulders a 10lb. penalty, but his last victory was gained in impressive style, and this improving four-year-old is suggested as an "each-way" investment.

Kimberley has an easy win over Loretto to his credit, and should win the Playing Fields Handicap (Div. I), while Madam Curie should score again in the Dorney Common Plate (Div. I).

Readers outside Eire should add one hour to times given below.

STALINO IS TAKEN TO WIN THE 2,000 GUINEAS

THE Irish Two Thousand Guineas, at the Curragh to-day, should provide one of the best and most thrilling contests for this classic for a long number of years.

STALINO may start favourite. His trainer, Blake, will have three other candidates in the field—Lucky Shah, Covent Garden and Knight's Emblem—and each is capable of winning. Stalino created something of a surprise last back-end by the manner in which he slammed a good field in the Beresfords, and among those he defeated were Roussel Water, Redbay, Spam, Niccola, Coup de Myth and Covent Garden, who will line up with him to-day. That was Stalino's only race, and reports to hand are that the son of Stardust—Inkling was never better, and stable connections are confident of success.

Porza may be the best of Hartigan's trio, but Collins supplies the usual problem with Mafosia, Roussel Water and Bazooka to represent his powerful stable. Preference here is for Bazooka.

Coup de Myth is well fancied, as is Niccola. The latter was successful in his only two outings this year—one over 6 furlongs at Naas and the other a mile at Phœnix Park. Niccola showed brilliant pace in each, and if Howard can hold him for the final phase he may win. In selecting Stalino, Niccola and Bazooka as three from whom the winner may spring, preference is given Stalino, and the minor placings may be filled by the other pair.

The Stewards' Handicap (1¼m.) will provide a good wagering medium, and Grand Inquisitor, a winner over the distance at the last meeting here, may experience most trouble from King of the Jungle, who finished very strongly in the Phœnix Park Handicap (1m.) a fortnight ago. Full selections are appended:—

Guinness Ord. Fall Back In Busier Market

THERE was a decided improvement in public interest on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday. Leading British Industrials claimed most attention, and further liquidation caused an easier trend.

The outstanding feature was the local selling of Guinness units. At one time, they dipped to 145s., a fall of 2s. on the day. Towards the close, small buying caused a slight recovery.

Textiles again inclined easier, and both Coats Ord. and Courtaulds Ord. gave way to 51s. 10½d. and 55s. 9d., respectively. B.A.T. Ord. declined to 124s. 6d., and Dunlop Rubbers to 51s. 6d. United Steel Ord. were lowered to 26s. 9d., and Woolworth Ord. to 79s. 11d. Gt. Universal Stores hardened to 27s. 7½d., and Imperial Chemical Ord. to 39s. 4½d.

Among Banks, Bank of Ireland stock lost a point at 368, but Nationals hardened to 51s. 6d. Coras Iompair Common was full, on small selling; but Gt. Northerns were still favoured.

Crowe Wilson Ord. gained 1s. 4d. at 19s. Allied Iron Ord. and Pref. both tended higher, and Browne and Nolan Pref. were raised several pence to 27s.

Bacon Ord. slipped back to 18s., and Dickens Leather Ord. weakened to 32s. 6d. Goulding Ord. shaded off to 33s. 10½d., but Independent "B" Ord. made headway to 96s. 9d. Hammond Lane "Rights" changed hands, in a small way, at 2s.

Sudden Burst of Strength In Gold Shares

FROM OUR LONDON FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT

THE feature of yesterday's generally improved London Stock Exchange tone was the burst of strength in Gold shares, mainly South African, but including also the West African leaders.

Investors have lately been turning their attention to this section in expectation that, now that the European War has ended, taxation of South African Gold Mines would be reduced in the next Union Budget, labour will return to the mines, and larger supplies of stores and machinery will be made available from the United States.

While the House, as a whole, presented a brighter appearance yesterday afternoon, Gold shares were outstanding. West "Wits," for instance, gained as much as 11/3 at £17 bid. Behind the rise was the confidence of buyers that Treasury sanction will be given to the proposed issue of shares in the subsidiary West Driefontein at a substantial premium.

Treasury moves are reported to be on foot to relax, but not to abandon entirely, control of new issues, and thus it is natural to expect a more sympathetic attitude to be shown towards gold mining flotations.

B.E.T. PROFITS RISING

Despite the many problems and difficulties with which transport companies have been faced during the war years, the British Electric Traction Co., Ltd., which has over £4,000,000 invested in such concerns, has enjoyed a steadily increasing income. This experience was repeated in the year to March 31st last, revenue reaching £779,608, against £767,962 in the previous year. After deducting general expenses and Debenture interest and providing £317,791, against £312,677 for income tax, the net balance was £323,737, against £316,441. A final dividend of 30 p.c. is announced, making, with the interim payment of 15 p.c., a total of 45 p.c. for the year. This is the same as for each year since 1940.

Previous to that year the company had been in the habit of paying 5 p.c. as dividend and 10 p.c. in the form of a capital bonus each year. After providing for the dividend, £62,110, against £56,961 last year, is added to the undivided profits account, making it £2,323,319. Thus, there would appear to be a substantial amount available for future capital bonuses should it be thought desirable to resume the pre-war method. The issued capital is £2,829,759, of which £790,752 is in "Deferred Ordinary stock. This stock is quoted at £1,215 for £100. During the war years it has been marked as low as £400, this figure being reached in 1940, when the highest marking was £800. In 1944 the price range was between £1,070 and £1,330.

BREWERY DIVIDENDS

Although the Brewery industry has shared with other trades in the recent reactionary movements on the Stock Exchange, dividend announcements do not indicate any falling-off in the prosperity it has enjoyed.

Benskins Watford Brewery is repeating its interim dividend at 6 p.c., which last year was followed by a payment of 14 p.c., against 12½ p.c. in the previous year. The company's £1 stock units are quoted at about 100/-.

The Cannon Brewery is maintaining its final dividend for 1944 at 7½ p.c., to which it was raised last year from 5 p.c. This makes a total of 10 p.c. for the year. Net profits are reported at £234,778, against £212,323. The capital is £3,000,000, including £700,000 in Deferred Ordinary stock, all held by the controlling company. Taylor Walker and Co., Ltd.

OBITUARY

LORD DUNBOYNE

The death is announced, at the age of 71, of Lord Dunboyne, at Vole House, Windsor. Fitz-Walter George Probyn Butler, 26th Baron Dunboyne, to give him his full title, entered the British Navy in 1886 and retired in 1911. He was recalled for service in 1914-18. He succeeded to the title and family estates in the counties of Meath and Clare in 1911, two years later he married Dora Isolde Tower, daughter of Commander F. F. Tower, Cowes.

The late Lord Dunboyne was one of the pioneers of scientific weather forecasting, and was appointed by the Admiralty to organise a special Department of Meteorology for the Naval Air Service. The heir is the Hon. Patrick Theobald Tower Butler, who was captured during the early stages of the recent European War while serving with the Irish Guards. The family seat is at Knappogue Castle, Quin, Co. Clare.

Six Years' Sentence

"The young boys of the city must be protected against a person like you," said Judge Connolly in the Criminal Court, Dublin, yesterday, when he sentenced Michael Moore (34), labourer, of no fixed address, to six years' penal servitude for an attempted indecent offence with a young boy.

Moore pleaded guilty.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT SALE BY AUCTION,
AT OUR COLLEGE GREEN SALEROOMS,
ON A DATE TO BE ANNOUNCED SHORTLY,
THE OLD-ESTABLISHED BUSINESS OF
Messrs. DONNELLY (DUBLIN), LTD., CORK ST., DUBLIN,
As a Going Concern of REGISTERED BACON CURERS,
TOGETHER WITH THE MODERN CORK STREET PREMISES RECOGNISED AS THE FINEST FACTORY IN EIRE, CENTRALLY SITUATED, AND COVERING A SITE OF ABOUT ONE AND A HALF ACRES

THE SALE WILL BE EFFECTED BY WAY OF TRANSFER OF SHARES.
THE HISTORY OF THE FIRM AND ITS PREDECESSORS GOES BACK OVER 100 YEARS. IN THE LAST FORTY YEARS, FROM 1904, TO THE BEGINNING OF 1944, AN UNBROKEN SERIES OF PROSPEROUS YEARS MARKED ITS STEADY GROWTH. THE PROFITS WERE LARGELY PUT BACK INTO THE BUSINESS, AND THE FACTORY WAS COMPLETELY REBUILT. ITS RE-EQUIPMENT IN 1926 MAKES IT ONE OF THE MOST MODERN AND MOST EFFICIENT FACTORIES IN EIRE. PARTICULARS OF PROFITS AND IMPROVEMENTS MAY BE HAD FROM MESSRS. PURTILL & COMPANY, AUDITORS, ANGLESEA STREET, DUBLIN.

The unrivalled progress and prosperity of the business have been largely due to the splendid co-operation of all classes of workers, but other factors contributed also. The metropolitan position of the factory, with the consumers' market at its door, makes distribution of its products prompt, easy and cheap for the city trade. For the country trade it lies at the head of four railways radiating out and the wonderful system of buses that is to be. The Company had regular customers for bacon, sausages and puddings from Cork to Donegal.
The supply of pigs comes largely by lorry. A day's journey coming and going from Dublin covers a very large area of the country. Lorries pick up the pigs on the farms, deliver them at the factory, and, reloading, they return to their home towns with local requirements. Dublin is the ideal centre for these operations. The Company holds Selling Quotas and Licences to cover the handling of the pigs, and these are part of the Goodwill now offered for Sale.
